John J. Murphy

Johnny Murphy's appointment last Dec. 27 as general manager in the wake of Bing Devine's stunning resignation to return to the St. Louis Cardinals climaxed another dramatic chapter in the tumultuous history of the New York Mets.

However, the 60-year-old (on July 14, 1968) product of Fordham University took the shrieking headline news in characteristic cool and confident stride. Johnny Murphy is familiar with the hot and tight spots of baseball. He's been there before. Often enough to warrant the esteem accompanying his reputation as one of the greatest relief pitchers the game has ever known ... and a vital factor in the intimidating pre-World War II Yankee dynasty.

The ownership of the Mets was equally confident in his ability to carry that playing field spirit and tradition into the challenging confines of the front office.

As Board Chairman Don Grant expressed it:

"It was the unanimous sentiment of the directors that no one was more qualified to assume command than Mr. Murphy. Having been associated with the club from the first day, no one is more familiar with the personnel of both the Met and minor league operations

"We feel extremely fortunate to have a man of his baseball background and stature available — and the fact that he was developed in our organization is a source of great satisfaction."

A native New York, Murphy officially joined the Yankee organization in 1929, following his graduation with the Bachelor of Arts Degree from Fordham.

After a five-year apprenticeship at Albany, St. Paul and Newark (including a brief 1932 stint with the Yankees), he made it to the majors on a varsity scale in 1934.

Under manager Joe McCarthy, Murphy developed into the premier relief pitcher of his time. He was a vital factor in seven American League and six world championships during his 11-year Yankee career interrupted by a two-and-a-half year World War II period in an administrative capacity with a Union Carbide Chemical subsidiary at Oak Ridge (Tenn.), associated with the development of the Atom bomb.

Upon being unconditionally released by the Yankees on the eve of 1947 season opener, Murphy was signed by the Boston Red Sox. It marked his final year of active competition. He concluded his major league playing career with 93 victories against 53 defeats in 415 games, and the distinction of being selected for three All-Star games.

In World Series play he made eight relief appearances covering 16-1/3 innings and was credited with victories in his only two series games of decision: a 1939 third game verdict over Cincinnati in 10 innings, 7-3, and a 1941 fourth game victory over Brooklyn, 7-4. The latter was the famous Ebbets Field encounter in which Hugh Casey nursed a 4-3 Dodger lead with two out in the ninth inning. Casey proceeded to fan Tommy Henrich for the out which would have ended the game. However, Mickey Owen let the third strike get past him, opening the door for a decisive four-run Yankee rally before the inning was completed.

After the 1947 campaign Red Sox general manager Joe Cronin signed Murphy as supervisor of Boston's New England scouting operation. A year later (in Oct. of 1948) he succeeded George Torporcer as director of player personnel after Torporcer retired because of failing health. Murphy functioned as farm director of the Red Sox until 1961.

Eager to return to New York, he joined the newly organized Mets as chief scout of the expansion club in the spring of 1961. After moving into the front office in an administrative capacity, Murphy was elevated to a vice-presidency in Sept. of 1964, a title he still retains.

The Yonkers-based Murphys (he and the former Elizabeth Havern of Greenwich Village observed their 36th wedding anniversary last New Year's Eve) are the parents of two sons: Thomas, and John, who have given them three grandsons.

The new general manager comes from a family of local political and athletic note. His father, Thomas, retired as Chief Clerk in the New York Department of Water Supply after 37 years of civil service. His older brother, Tom, is a former Police Commissioner of New York City. As a member of the U.S. Attorney General's staff, he had achieved a national reputation as the prosecutor who obtained a conviction against Alger Hiss. He subsequently won a Harry S. Truman presidential appointment to the Federal Judgeship he still holds.

Murphy's maternal grandfather, John White, and a cousin of the same name, had brief major league trials with Boston and Cincinnati, respectively.

Murphy actually played in organized baseball while he was a junior at Fordham, pitching for the Yankees' Middle-Atlantic League team in Scottdale, Pa., in 1928, under the assumed name of "Johnny McNamara." He compiled a 9-8 record and a 2.98 ERA for Scottdale during the Fordham summer hiatus.

The first Yankee player representative (and similarly the American League representative), in 1945, Murphy won many honors during his distinguished major league career. One which ranks among his proudest was his selection on the All-Time All-Star Yankee team voted by the New York baseball writers in 1952.

REQUIREMENTS FOR A "SAVE"

A "save" is credited to a relief pitcher on the winning team if he meets one of the following requirements:

(1) Faces the potential tying or winning run.

(2) Pitches one or more perfect innings in protecting a two-run lead.

(3) Pitches at least two innings and finishes if his team was three runs ahead when he entered game.

The Manager: Gil Hodges

Gil Hodges rarely has more than a little to say. And when he says it, he says a lot.

Illustration: Asked not too long ago what kind of manager he'd like to be, he replied, "There are only two kinds of managers. Winning managers and ex-managers. I like to work."

He's the kind of manager the Mets wanted. The kind they're happy to have working for them since Oct. 11, when they gave the Washington Senators a good chunk of cash and a good chunk of pitcher — Bill Denehy — as payment for the best chunk of man to succeed Wes Westrum.

He had gotten to last place Washington in the first place because the Mets wouldn't stand in his way when the Senators offered him the opportunity to become a manager on May 22, 1963, after dismissing Mickey Vernon.

So he gimped to Washington on the crippled knee that forced him on the disabled list after 11 games and ended a brilliant 17-year National League playing career at age 39. And began a major league managing career that undoubtedly will live as long as he wants it to.

Gilbert Ray Hodges, born April 4, 1924, in Princeton, Ind., is safe at home — his adopted home of New York City since he married Brooklyn-bred Joan Lombardi in 1948, a date that coincides with his first year as a member of the Brooklyn varsity.

They never forgot him. He left too much to remember as the soft-spoken giant of a gentle man; and as much to remember as a player of idolatry. The record speaks eloquently for itself.

When that crippled knee ended his active career, Hodges had: hit more home runs (370) than any righthanded batter in National League history — a figure then exceeded by righthanders in the majors only by Jimmy Foxx (534); established a still-standing National League mark of 14 grand slams; become the 6th player to hit four circuit blows in one game (Aug. 31, 1950, against the Braves); accumulated 22 or more home runs 11 consecutive seasons; accounted for 100 or more RBI seven consecutive years; played in seven World Series and been selected on eight National League All-Star squads.

Hodges first attracted Dodger attention during his sophomore semester at St. Joseph College (Renssalaer, Ind.) in 1943, when he was approached by Stan Feezle, a Brooklyn scout. He had been a catcher and shortstop but his major league debut at the end of the 1943 campaign was at third base ("I remember it well; I struck out twice against Johnny VanderMeer and made two errors").

The next two years were devoted to World War II service as a Marine sergeant, and after the post-war 1946 season on the Newport News farm as a catcher, he was brought up to the Dodgers the following year, and utilized sparingly, in 28 games.

In June of 1948, however, Leo Durocher made a decision born of inspiration. He transferred Hodges to first base. And, in turn, one of the greatest defensive agents the sport has ever known at the position, was born.

He accompanied the Dodgers westward to Los Angeles in 1958 (on an occupational basis only; Brooklyn was, as it still is, "home") and when National League baseball was restored to New York, Hodges was selected for $75,000 as an "Original Met" in the expansion draft of Oct., 1961.

Gil and Joan Hodges have six Met rooters in the family: daughters Irene, Barbara and Cynthia; a son, Gil II; "Bambi" a 12-year-old mongrel, and "Lady Gina", a 3-year-old German shepherd.

"ROOKIES": A rookie is a player not more than 45 days on a major league roster during 25-man roster cutdown dates or who has not exceeded 90 times at bat or 45 innings pitched if short of 45 days.

THE PLAYERS.....

AGEE, Tommie Lee — OF

BORN: Aug. 9, 1942, Magnolia, Ala. HT: 5-11; WT: 185;

BATS: R; THROWS: R; RESIDENCE: Mobile, Ala.

ACQUIRED: From Chicago(AL) with Al Weis for Tommy Davis, Jack Fisher and Billy Wynne, Dec. 15, 1967.

Relied on to resolve Mets' problem in centerfield, where 10 different players have been employed during past two years . . . American League Rookie of the Year in 1966, when his accomplishments included 22 home runs, 86 RBI, 172 hits and 44 stolen bases; plus league departmental lead among outfielders in putouts (376), total chances (395) and double plays (7) . . . Compiled extraordinary stolen base ratio past two years with 72 in 100 attempts . . . Had rightfield job won in 1965, but broke right hand in home plate slide on trip north after White Sox broke camp . . . Member of American League All-Star squad past two seasons . . . Originally signed by Cleveland organization by Hoot Evers and Mike McNally for reported $60,000 bonus off Grambling College campus, where he had won football scholarship . . . Played briefly with Indians in 1962-63-64 before being traded to White Sox on Jan. 20, 1965, in three-way deal: Agee, John Romano and Tommy John went to Chicago for Rocky Colavito and catcher Camilo Carreon; earlier in day White Sox had acquired Colavito from Kansas City for Jim Landis, Mike Hershberger and Fred Talbot.

Coupled with Cleon Jones as spectacular 1-2 athletic punch at County Training (Mobile) High School, where they were teammates in football, track and baseball . . . Was pitcher-shortstop in baseball; end in football; 9-7 dash man in track; and forward in basketball . . . One of 11 children (nine sisters), all living . . . Ironic touch to deal that brought him to Mets: participated with Tommy Davis in Presidential Fitness Program film made in Puerto Rico shortly before trade was made . . . With Jones and Amos Otis of Mets; Billy Williams of Cubs; and manager Eddie Stanky of White Sox, forms Mobile mini major league winter baseball colony.

Groomed as successor to Roy McMillan, pony-sized shortstop fulfilled every high organizational expectation in first full season at job last year . . . Coming on strong after shaky first month, wiry San Franciscan steadily built average to season's peak of .291 on July 29 before finding rigors of 151-game performance too demanding and tailing off toward end of campaign to .254 due primarily to fatigue . . . Played more games at shortstop (149) than any other NL infielder, and was runner-up to Gene Alley among NL shortstops in putouts (254 to 257) and total chances (753 to 783) . . . After committing 21 errors first month of season, was charged with only 11 rest of way . . . Tied Cleon Jones for club lead in stolen bases with 12, but determined to improve base-running technique (he was thrown out 13 times trying to steal in 1967) . . . Despite brief (two-year) experience as switch-hitter, natural right-handed batter compiled .281 average from left side last season . . . Collected first (and only) home run of major league career last Aug. 17 at Forbes Field on line drive off Juan Pizzaro that resulted in an inside-the-park four-bagger . . . As Sunset (Hayward, Calif.) High School luminary he captained baseball, football (halfback) and basketball teams as senior, and won basketball scholarship to San Francisco State . . . Signed with Mets after freshman semester . . . Spent winter in New York with wife and daughter, working for ABC Freight Forwarding Co., and filling club speaking engagements.

DUROCHER'S MANAGERIAL SCHOOL

Gil Hodges is one of six current major league managers who played under Leo Durocher in the National League. The others are Herman Franks (Giants), Gene Mauch (Phillies), Al Dark (Indians), Eddie Stanky (White Sox) and Bill Rigney (Angels).

If you have a camera and want a picture, you'll find a Met manager a good subject.

All three Met managers — Casey Stengel, Wes Westrum and Gil Hodges — have won awards at the annual dinner of the New York Press Photographers Association.

Gil Hodges hit the first home run in Met history. It came off the Cardinals' Larry Jackson in the fourth inning of the Mets' first game — April 11, 1962 in St. Louis.

JONES, Cleon Joseph — OF

BORN: Aug. 4, 1942, Plateau, Ala. HT: 6-0; WT: 195;

BATS: R; THROWS: L; RESIDENCE: Mobile, Ala.

ACQUIRED: Signed by scout Julian Morgan, July 5, 1962.

On the heels of achieving Major League Rookie team prominence in 1966, Jones appeared headed for super star stature in spring training last season, when he wound up Mets' leading batter in Grapefruit League competition with .385 average, fielded brilliantly and flashed customary blazing speed . . . However, as soon as regular season started he went hitless in first 18 appearances and never did fully recover from that slump . . . Didn't reach .200 mark until June 24 . . . Most productive period Aug. 12-22, when he went off on 13-game hitting streak that was high for club (along with Ed Kranepool and Tommy Davis) . . . Despite sharply reduced on-base ratio, still managed to share with Bud Harrelson club lead for stolen bases with 12 (in 14 attempts) . . . Set new all-time Met record for steals in 1966 with 16 in 24 attempts.

Aquisition of Tommie Agee expected to play strong role in hoped-for recovery of Jones' 1966 form . . . Childhood buddies (and off season neighbors), Jones and Agee were Mobile (Ala.) County Training High School teammates in baseball, track and football . . . Jones is regarded as No. 1 luminary in school's athletic history . . . Set season state record for touchdowns with 26 in nine games as 1960 halfback, attracting pro football inquiries.

SEAVER, George Thomas "Tom" — RHP

BORN: Nov. 17, 1944, Fresno, Cal. HT: 6-1; WT: 200;

BATS: R; THROWS: R; RESIDENCE: Manhattan Beach, Cal.

ACQUIRED: Signed by scout Nelson Burbrink, Apr. 3, 1966.

Greatest success and Cinderella story in brief history of Mets, within year of literally being plucked out of a grab bag he exploded across major league horizon with meteoric effect as National League Rookie of the Year . . . It marked fitting climax to list of accomplishments which included: club records for victories (16); complete games (18); strikeouts (170) and ERA (2.76) . . . Rookie of Year award represented first by N.L. pitcher since Jack Sanford of Phillies was tapped in 1957, and first time in league history player from last place club was designated . . . It also marked first individual National League award won by a Met . . . Signed by Braves to $50,000 bonus contract after special phase of Jan., 1966, free agent draft, Commissioner's office voided agreement, holding Braves in violation of college rule by signing him after USC season had started. Special drawing was held open to any other major league club willing to match Atlanta contract. Mets, Phillies and Indians only teams willing to meet conditions and Mets won drawing . . . Starting off in pro ball on Triple A level at Jacksonville in 1966, he proceeded to lead league in starts (32), and establish seasonal and single game strikeout records of 188 and 14, respectively, to earn advancement to Mets.

Only Ferguson Jenkins, with 20, turned in more complete games in major leagues in 1967 . . . In addition to his pitching contributions, he also collected more hits (11), RBI (5), and runs (5) than any other Met hurler . . . As base-runner he was 2 for 2 in stolen bases . . . Represented Mets on National League All Star team and credited with a "save". Entered game in 15th inning and protected 2-1 lead, with a walk representing only base-runner.

Product of Fresno (Calif.) High School, where he was teammate of Dick Selma, and served Marine Corps hitch upon graduating . . . After enrolling at USC was selected by Dodgers in free agent draft of June, 1965, but elected to remain in college . . . Pitched in Alaska for Goldpanners in summers of 1964-65 . . . Sentimental coincidence develops out of father Charles' reputation as one-time Walker Cup golfer: Cup donor was father of G. Herbert Walker, Jr., and now sons of each are associated with Mets, one as a pitcher and other as Executive Vice-President.

BORN: Nov. 4, 1943, Santa Ana, Cal. HT: 5-11; WT: 175;

BATS: R; THROWS: R; RESIDENCE: Fresno, Cal.

ACQUIRED: Signed by scout Al Lyons, May 28, 1963.

Regarded among hardest-throwing members of Met staff and trying to develop curve as means of making his speed more effective . . . Broke into majors in Sept., 1965, by beating Cardinals, and followed up with 10-inning 1-0 decision over Braves in which he set club strikeout record of 13 . . . Never regained that form in 1966 after being struck on pitching elbow while batting against Bob Buhl of Phillies on May 30 . . . Last season recalled from Jacksonville June 3 after pitching shortage created by injury to Don Cardwell and heavy doubleheader schedule . . . Used virtually exclusively in relief, he picked up two "saves" . . . Product of Fresno (Calif.) High School which developed Tom Seaver, Jim Maloney and Dick Ellsworth and signed by Mets after sophomore year at Fresno City College . . . Although he didn't make pro debut until June (of 1963), wound up leading California League in strikeouts with 224 at Salinas.

Although he had to leave Mets Aug. 14 to report for military service, still came within two games of Ken MacKenzie's 1962 record for appearances by left-handed pitcher . . . Picked up three "saves" in addition to four victories as rookie . . . One of triumphs represented longest pitching stretch: five-inning job in Astrodome Aug. 1, when he came in with bases loaded and none out in fifth inning, with Mets leading 3-1, and proceeded to strike out Rusty Staub, Eddie Mathews and Bob Aspromonte in order . . . Wasn't picked in Class A draft of June, 1965, until 28th round, and after reporting to Marion Rookie League club was advanced to Auburn before baptismal pro season was completed . . . Invited to Mets' 1966 Mets' camp and groomed along way at Williamsport, Greenville and Jacksonville that year in relief role for path to Shea Stadium.

BORN: June 30, 1944, Baltimore, Md. HT: 6-2; WT: 205;

Parlaying sheer determination and overnight maturity, "Casey's Boy" started to put the pieces together in 1967, casting a shadow of the complete ball player with an imminent future of substance . . . Shuttling between the outfield and a first base experiment that carried from spring training into the early phase of the regular season, he nailed down the varsity rightfield job over the second half of the campaign with a performance that represented the most improvement both at bat and in the field of any Met . . . His pro career-high .281 average was second only Tommy Davis' .302, and spectacular defensive plays restored his status as "The Peepul's Cherce" of Shea . . . Sacrificed power for technique and learned to hit to right field . . . Contributed 10-game hitting streak, and his 17 doubles (personal high) tied Ed Kranepool for runner-up spot in that department to Davis' club record of 32 . . . RBI total of 53 best of three-year Met career.

Captured fancy of Shea as rookie in 1965 by hitting 19 home runs to eclipse totals of Mickey Mantle (13), Roger Maris (14) and Stan Musial (10) as freshmen . . . Connected for first major league homer in second at-bat, pinch blow off Dick Farrell . . . Although 1966 home run production fell off to eight, managed to hit two pinch circuits. As result, has four lifetime pinch home runs and all-time Met lead in that category . . . Captained soccer team as goalie at Sparrows Point (Baltimore) High School, which had no baseball program, and member of state championship basketball team . . . Signed by Mets off Maryland University campus after freshman season of soccer and baseball . . . Taking off-season courses toward degree in business administration at NYU School of Commerce.

The 1967 Mets set National League records for most players and pitchers used in one season. The Mets used 54 players to break the mark of 53 set by the 1944 Brooklyn Dodgers and 27 pitchers, three more than the record of 24 by the 1912 Cincinnati Reds and 1946 Philadelphia Phillies. The 27 pitchers in one season equals the major league mark of the 1915 Philadelphia Athletics and 1955 Kansas City Athletics.
